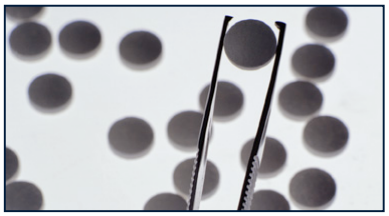
Alliance for Clinical Trials in Oncology
FOUNDATION



The Alliance for Clinical Trials in Oncology Foundation, a nonprofit, tax-exempt foundation that raises funds to help the Alliance for Clinical Trials in Oncology answer important cancer research questions through large-scale clinical trials. The Alliance seeks to reduce the impact of cancer by uniting a broad community of scientists and clinicians from many disciplines that are committed to discovering, validating and disseminating effective strategies for the prevention and treatment of cancer.

By supporting Alliance clinical trials and laboratory research through the Alliance for Clinical Trials in Oncology Foundation, you can help find new ways to prevent, treat and cure many types of cancer, including leukemia/lymphoma and myeloma, and cancers of the brain, breast, prostate, lung and GI tract. Gifts to the Foundation may be designated according to your wishes, and are tax-deductible to the extent permitted by law.

Here are some recent initiatives supported by the Alliance for Clinical Trials in Oncology Foundation:

- New chemotherapy treatments for brain, breast, prostate, lung and colorectal cancer.
- New surgical techniques for breast and colon cancer.
- Genetic studies of breast cancer risk.
- Molecular determinants of response to therapy for breast, colorectal and lung cancers, and leukemia.
- Research that improves the quality of life for cancer patients and their caregivers.
